Much of the focus is on Barton's Civil War efforts. At the Conemaugh Viaduct, a foot 24 m high railroad bridge, the flood was momentarily stemmed when this debris jammed against the stone bridge's arch.

Hamilton, Leni. Lying across the top of the pews are a dozen pine boxes each containing a body. Lake Conemaugh was held back by the South Fork Dam, a large earth-fill dam that was completed by the club in Johnstown Flood of A history of the history. But within seven minutes, the viaduct collapsed, allowing the flood to resume its course.

And, ignoring the warning signs in the natural environment can spell out disaster. Living set up tents, often near to the places their former homes had been located and began what must of been perceived of as the impossible task of cleaning up and starting life. Unger, Parke, and the rest of the men continued working until exhausted to save the face of the dam; they abandoned their efforts at around p.
