More a concise statement of national principles than a detailed plan of governmental operation, the Constitution has evolved to meet the changing needs of a modern society profoundly different from the eighteenth-century world in which its creators lived. Constitution protects the freedom of speech, religion and the press.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia. The Fourth Amendment protects people The friends of our country have long seen and desired that the power of making war, peace, and treaties, that of levying money, and regulating commerce, and the correspondent executive and judicial authorities, should be fully and effectually vested in the General Government of the Union; but the impropriety of delegating such extensive trust to one body of men is evident: hence results the necessity of a different organization. Freedom of speech—the right to express opinions without government restraint—is a democratic ideal that dates back to ancient Greece. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice
